Views of Senators Clarke of Wyoming. Cullom. Hansbrough and Some Others.

Senator Clarke of Wyoming said to a Star reporter this morning that he thought the administration had a good deal to be congratulated on in the capture of Aguinaldo and the election of two republican senators from Nebraska, all within forty-eight hours. The capture of Aguinaldo, he said, might not be as important in its results as many would anticipate, but it would probably convince the ignorant and superstitious natives that their chief was not invulnerable, and would destroy their fetich and increase the number of surrenders. This, he said, had been indicated by important surrenders since Aguinaldo's capture. He thought organized rebellion would soon disappear, but that hostile bands might keep up their operations for some time to come. Facetionsly he suggested that the best way to completely dispose of Aguinaldo would be induce him to start a weekly political newspaper.

Senator Cullom's Views.

"I think," said Senator Cullom to a Star reporter this morning, "that the capture of Aguinaldo was about the best move that could be made. I have thought since the first that his capture would accomplish best results. He may not have been as important a factor in the Philippine trouble of late as he was early in the rebellion. but his being made a prisoner is sure to prove a great discouragement to the in-surgents. The practical pacification of the islands will, I believe, come speedily, though for years, perhaps, outlaw bands will keep up their predatory operations, giving us some trouble."

"I am glad Aguinaldo is captured, and that Funston captured him," said Senator Hansbrough. "It is another evidence of the dash and effectiveness of our volunteer officers."

Mr. McCall's Sarcasm.

Representative McCall of Cambridge, Mass., who has taken a rather advanced position in opposition to the administration policy concerning the Philippines, had this to say concerning Aguinaldo's capture:

"It appears that Aguinaldo has made a second voyage on an American ship. The first was undertaken nearly three years ago under the delusion that he was to fight for the independence of his country. The second was concluded yesterday, after possession of his person had been secured by means which may or may not reflect pecu-liar luster upon our arms, but which were at least quite consistent with our previous dealings with him and his people. Under the circumstances he will very likely fail to appreciate the moral grandeur of this nation, but as he is only a Tagal he can searcely be expected to comprehend the lofty standards of a full-fledged world

Will Not Affect the Outcome ..

Former Representative McAleer of Philadelphia did not think the capture of Aguinaldo amounted to much or would have any considerable effect on the Philippine "Aguinaldo has not been of prominence in the war for a long time," he said. "He has been discredited and in hiding, and the individual commanders have been acting for themselves. Consequently, I fail to see where his capture will affect the conduct or the outcome of the present contest. As far as he is concerned, I suppose, he will be kept a prisoner somewhere for a time, although the government might well turn him loose. He may be sent to Guam, brought to the United States or simply deported from the islands. Aguinaldo is prisoner of war, and as such can be held until peace is declared or until he is exchanged. Funston did a daring thing when he sought out and captured Aguinaldo."

TRIALS OF CRIMINAL CASES.

Maximum Penalties the Rule in Local Option Indictments.

Special Correspondence of The Evening Star. ROCKVILLE, Md., March 28, 1901. The trial of criminal cases began in the circuit court here this morning with Judges Henderson and Motter on the bench. Of the cases on the docket the following number were marked for trial at this term: Violation of local option law, 41; assault with intent to murder, 2; assault, 11; burglary, 2; forgery, 4; perjury, 1; carrying concealed weapons, 2; larceny, 3: obtaining money under false pretenses,

1; bastardy, 1; statutory taking, 2; statutory breaking, 1. The greater portion of the day was deveted to the trial of local option cases. Judging from the sentences imposed in the cases in which convictions were had today, maximum penalties will be the rule, and there is every indication that the term will prove disastrous to those violators of the local option law against whom indictments are pending. In three of these cases disposed of today the highest penalty-$300 and costs—was imposed. In two others, each a first offense, the lowest penalty— $50 and costs—was imposed. The first of the cases tried today was that against Charles O. Brill, manager of the Rock Spring Club, on the Conduit road between Washington and Cabin John bridge. The testimony showed that this Club house was visited by Wilson E. Brown, agent for the Montgomery County Anti-Saloon League, who purchased a bot-tle of beer from a colored waiter. The de-requisite number of signatures seems to be fense was that Mr. Brill was simply an assured. employe of the club, and that either the Massrs directors or the man who actually sold the beer should have been indicted. The jury promptly returned a verdict of guilty. Mr. Brill pleaded guilty in a similar case in which Mr. Brown again appeared as prosecuting witness. The highest penalty was imposed in each case. Stevenson, also colored, and was given the maximum punishment.

Carl Blaubock, proprietor of the Great Falls Hotel, was also tried upon the charge of violating the local option law. In this case Mr. Brown testified that he purchased whisky and beer from a young lady employe at the Great Falls Hotel. The state, however, failed to prove that Blaubock on Fairmount Heights, and others are pre-

John Mack, colored, was convicted of having sold a drink of whisky to a colored woman. It was shown that he dispensed his liquor from a bottle which he carried about with him. He pleaded guilty in another case. In consideration of the offenses being his first ones the court improved the lowest penalty. posed the lowest penalty-$50 and costs, or six months in the Maryland house of correction-in each case.

James Ganley, a merchant at Boyd's, against whom an indictment for the same offense was pending, failed to answer to his name when his case was called for trial and his recognizance-$200-was forfeited. Other cases disposed of were the follow-ing: State against Ernest Warfield; pleaded guilty to statutory breaking, and was sen-tenced to the Maryland penitentiary for tenced to the Maryland penitentiary for two years. State against William Davis, larceny; pleaded guilty and was committed to the Maryland house of refuge. State against John Simms, forgery; plead guilty; sentence suspended. In this case the defendant forged the name of Mrs. R. C. Warfield upon Rockville merchants for goods. Owing to his youth and prayions goods. Owing to his youth and previous good record, sentence was suspended dur-ing good behavior.

In each local option case in which the agent of the Anti-Saloon League appears as the prosecuting witness the league gets one-half or the informer's share of the fine last summer, and warned them that a repetition of the offense would mean a jail sen-tence for them and a forfeiture of their license, but the people of Seat Pleasant and Chesapeake Junction feel that there will be trouble as long as the saloons are there, especially as the place is so easily accessible to the city, and the temptation to the proprietors to accommodate the crewds with liquor on Sundays might prove to be too strong. Indeed, one of the saloon men was heard to declare that he would have to close his place if it were not for the Sunday trade; that the business of the week would not even pay for his ifcen A petition has been prepared and signed by a majority of the residents of this community, requesting the clerk of the court, Mr. James B. longer than can be helped. The movement is largely the outcome of the crusade begun against the District line resorts by The Evening Star and other papers last summer, and it is participated in by all classes, so that it is not a temperance agitation of the ordinary kind. The healthfulness, beauty and fruitfulness of this part of Maryland, together with its great accessibility to Washington and the cheapness of its lands, would soon render it popular as a suburban home territory if the one objectionable feature of the disorderly Sunday resort were eliminated, and this the people are determined to do, if possible, by every necessary means justified by law and order.

The petition to the clerk of court is as follows: "We, the undersigned residents and taxpayers of Seat Pleasant, Kent district, Prince George's county, Md., do hereby petition your honor as follows:

"During the year 1900 the saloons and dance halls at Chesapeake Junction and the saloon at Seat Pleasant House were a source of scandal and annoyance to this neighborhood. The scenes of drunkenness and rowdy'sm which took place there, especially on Sundays, were very obnoxious to the law-abiding people of this neighbor-hood, and inspired the unanimous and frequent condemnation of the press of Wash ington city to the grave detriment of the material interests and the good name of our community. Although some of the of-fenders were convicted and fined for violation of the law, we have no satisfactory assurance that the disgraceful conditions of last summer will not be repeated during the coming season.

"Therefore, we, as citizens and taxpayers aforesaid, having only the good of our community at heart, and without malice toward any person, do hereby petition your honor to use the discretion vested in you by the laws of our state in regard to the granting of liquor licenses; so that if, in the exercise of that discretion, you cannot refuse all applications for such license from this section, you will at least limit, as far as possible, the number granted."
The petition was presented to Mr. Belt by a committee last Wednesday, and he promised to give the matter his careful
